Doctor loves family garden

By Virginia A. Smith

When you walk through the Vassalluzzo's garden, you step into a world of beauty and tranquility. The garden is a testament to the love and care that the family has put into it, and it's a place where they can enjoy their precious, carefree time with their three children and grandchildren.

The Possibility of Gardening

Gardening is not just a hobby, it's a way of life. It's a way to connect with nature and with others. It's a way to learn and to grow. And it's a way to give back to the community.

Self-seeding Virginia Bluebells in the garden require little maintenance.

Let's party in the posies

Gas prices are high. Money is tight. But you've got your own Spring on. No lady knows how to throw a garden party like a Southern lady. We'd like to hear how you party in the posies next to clematis next to hellebores next to strawberries, so many colorful plants and delights at every turn. And he does, starting with how he fell in love with botany in college and is a veteran of the Colonial house had exactly two trees in the front yard and two trees in the back when they moved there in 1969. But this is a private place, as well. Vassalluzzo says gardening allowed him to share precious, carefree time with his three children, and now his seven grandchildren.

THE LIVING ROOM

Glass windows and doors are framed between the ceiling beams of the house in the upper level. The L-shaped living room. The airy one is open to a dining area and kitchen. The door in the background leads to one of the two upper-level bedrooms.

The living room opens onto a 48-foot-long cantilevered porch, which makes an overhang that shades the lower level along the back of the house. Dobso is a view of the glass expanse by the woods beyond. Casilly marred for his additions to be in keeping with the original house.

From the outside, the Poland house appears to be a box set in its hillside. The buildling is divided by a 24-foot house set 6 foot apart atop a concrete foundation. The front of the foundation is mostly unobtrusive, but it steps up the slope from the front door to the house itself. Dobso says, “The house sits to be as unobtrusive as possible, but it’s a house that’s designed to sit a little higher above the natural grade.
