Central Park up for the ‘challenge’
11th Annual Bull City Chili Challenge slated for June

BY ANN ALEXANDER

Put Saturday, June 15 as your calendar reminder for a great time at the Bull City Chili Challenge. This annual event, which is hosted by the Durham Central Park, Inc., is a fun and friendly competition where teams compete to see who can create the best-tasting chili.

According to Durham Central Park, Inc., the Chili Challenge is a great opportunity for the community to come together and enjoy some delicious food. “This is a great way to support our local community while having fun at the same time,” an event organizer said.

The competition is open to anyone who would like to enter. “We accept teams of any size, from small groups to large organizations,” the organizer added.

“We’re also excited to announce that this year’s Chili Challenge will feature a salsa contest, which is new to the event,” the organizer said.

The salsa contest will be judged by a panel of judges who will be looking for the best-tasting salsa. “Participants will be judged on flavor, texture, and presentation,” the organizer added.

The Chili Challenge and salsa contest will be held on Saturday, June 15 at Durham Central Park, Inc. Registration is open now, and the deadline to enter is June 10. “We encourage everyone to participate, whether you’re a seasoned cook or just starting out,” the organizer said.

Teachers, have you thought about science/nature-related lesson plans and activities to keep your students engaged and interested? Would you like to gain more experience with science/nature-related topics and get new lesson plans that meet N.C. Standard Course of Study Requirements? If so, the following teacher workshops in June and July will benefit you.

The Durham Soil & Water Conservation District, along with the City of Durham Public Works Department and the Durham County Cooperative Extension Service, will host a week of professional educator workshops July 22-26.

A different workshop is offered each day focusing on a different science/nature-related topic. Each workshop is designed around a teacher’s manual that contains multiple lesson plans, pre-K-12. Participants will receive a teacher’s manual, as well as detailed instruction on the topics, resources available to teachers and more. Educators that work with kids outside of the typical classroom, (i.e., scouts, group leaders, informal educators) can also benefit.

July 22: Project Learning Tree: Learn ways to engage children in outdoor exploration and to bring nature indoors. Adaptation options for younger and older students. Participants will take home PLT’s Environment Experiences for Early Childhood and Pre-K-6 environmental education activity guides and an accompanying music CD.

July 23: WOW! The Wonders of Wetlands: This fun, hands-on workshop will teach educators to understand the basic functions and values of wetlands. Each participant will receive a copy of the WOW! The Wonders of Wetlands education guide.

July 25: Project WET: Learn to facilitate awareness, appreciation, knowledge and stewardship of North Carolina’s water resources. This newly updated guide includes Action Education, Reading Corner and new activities. The focus of this workshop will be on activities that align with Common Core science standards for grades 3-8.

July 26: Soil Solutions: The 4H Curriculum addresses the North Carolina curriculum requirements for third grade with regards to soils and plants. Parts is adapted to other grades and address different learning styles with a strong focus on hands-on learning. Teachers can modify all the curricula to meet their needs, as well as address other subject matters, including English, math and social studies.

All free workshops will be offered at the West Point on the Enka Park. The workshops will start at 9 a.m. each day and conclude by 3:30 p.m. The cost is $30 for each workshop or you can attend all five for $150. Registration is limited, so educators should register soon by contacting Lisa Marochak at 919-560-0558 or lmarochak@dconc.gov.
