The impulse toward Modern design is shown here with the cantilevered bay windows and with ample glass doors on the first floor, including underneath the screen porch.

A Hillsborough house blends an edgy aesthetic, homey warmth and syvlan wonder. This time of year, we step out into the garden to see which daylilies have names give hints about the appearance of the flowers. My biggest problem with daylilies used to be their propensity to multiply. Now I actually enjoy this time of year, we step out into the garden to see which daylilies have names give hints about the appearance of the flowers. My biggest problem with daylilies used to be their propensity to multiply. Now I enjoy.

The wavy glass windows of the Durham County Judicial Building reflect the Trinity United Methodist Church steeple in downtown Durham. The judicial building was built in 1976 to take the place of the old Durham County Courthouse across the street. Trinity United Methodist Church first held services in this building in 1900.

The original church congregation dates to the early 1830s. The church has occupied the current site at 215 N. Church St. since 1861.

The approach to the Twersky/Beauclair house features an arching concrete walkway. The two nooks cantilever into the sloping landscape. As the house nestles gracefully into the本着Japanese maple. Bushes provide light and space for a treasured Japanese maple.

Even the master bath has views down two axes. Touches such as varied woods and custom tiling invite one to linger. The neighbors might not know, but in a good way.

The great room's vaulted ceiling, large expanses of glass and views through to the screen-in porch below the master to the center. There, all the parts of house are gathered together — a large coherent hearth, a prominent ceiling in the kitchen and an extended8-inch siding on the main story, 3-inch siding, different from the canti-
