STAY WITH GRACE: The Boney family lecture – Introduction

“Where did you come from? Where do you find yourself now? Where are you going?”....

These were the first three questions they asked me in architecture school.

I am sure I tried to provide a clever, witty response at the time, but I have often come back to that question, and I think it bears considering: where do WE collectively find ourselves? How does our past inform our present and our future? Where do we want to be and what will determine that? Architecture, more than anything, is a repository of our collective culture. It is a window to our past, and a portal to our aspirations in the future. My family has been honored to have played a role in crafting this living history over the last century, and we are honored to be here today. On behalf of my brother Charles, and my father Charlie, thank you for indulging us with this little talk. I send apologies from my cousin Paul Boney, who could not be with us today, but we do have his stand-in.....(insert image).

“So where did you come from?”...

For the Boneys, the answer to the first question begins in 1880 in rural eastern North Carolina, near Wallace. There, my grandfather, Leslie Boney, was born to a merchant-farmer and his wife. One of six children, he worked on the family farm until he entered NC College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts in Raleigh in 1899. At the urging of his uncle Gabriel Boney from Wilmington, he entered into textiles. He quickly discovered that this was not for him.

However, he had great proficiency with a pen, and was encouraged by the faculty to take all the drawing classes he could. He could not afford an additional year to finish the Architecture course requirements, so he graduated in 1903 with a degree in textiles.

From there, he went to work for noted Wilmington architect Charles McMillen, working as a draftsman in the booming port city on projects such as the Masonic Building, and the Bridgers residence (now Graystone Inn). He returned to Wallace in 1906 and designed several projects there. He worked for W.J. Wilkins in Florence. He opened an office in Goldsboro in 1913. Finally, in 1918 he returned to Wilmington for good, working for Mr. Wilkins and managing his Wilmington office, which had recently been given the commission for the design of New Hanover High School.

When New Hanover was complete, Leslie Sr. became partners with Mr. James F. Gause Architect, and began designing schools across North Carolina. When Mr. Gause died in 1922, he took the train to Asheville, took his architecture exam, and began our firms practice officially.

I would like to share a passage from a friend, architect WG Clark, who sums up part of our responsibility as architects, and what we should aspire to:

“Architecture, whether as a town or a building, is the reconciliation of ourselves with the natural land. At the necessary juncture of culture and place, architecture seeks not only the minimal ruin of landscape, but something more difficult: a replacement of something that was lost with something that atones for the loss...

Settlement implies a benign and sympathetic occupation...settlement is the establishment of home...the use of a place must not be separate from the abiding in it...

I think it will always be difficult to build: it should be difficult. We cannot always succeed and sometimes will not even recognize our own success or failure. But we want to stay with grace, and therefore do what we can, whether we are making a tiny house in the woods or a great city. Our gradual understanding is that we are not true colonists, with our home elsewhere. Our home is here, and what we build will be its parts. It is worth the effort to try to build well. “

For the next little while, we will describe our family's effort to STAY WITH GRACE in Wilmington, to KNOW WHERE WE ARE as professionals within a greater context, and to TRY TO BUILD WELL. Our home is here - we are grateful for this place which has nurtured us for 90 years, and which we sincerely hope we have left a little better off for our presence.

Thank you.

Therefore when we build
let us think that we build forever.
Let it not be for present delight nor for present use alone.
Let it be such work as our descendants will thank us for - and let us think as we lay stone on stone that a time is to come when those stones will be held sacred because our hands have touched them and that men will say as they look upon the labor and the wrought substance of them
“See! this our fathers did for us.”

John Ruskin, The Seven Lamps of Architecture, 1849
